About Lucknow

The name Lucknow is synonymous with beautiful buildings of "Lakhauri" bricks, auspicious pair of fishes, tiny and delicate toys and shining banks of river Gomti. As soon as this name is mentioned the fragrance of "itra" (Perfume) starts titillating your nose; the musical notes of "raga bhairavi and the unforgettable sound of dancer's tinklets starts ringing in your ears; and the sweetness of "dussheri" mangoes, juicy muskmelons, malai (cream) and "gulab revdis" (sweet) descend in your mouth. The life, cuisine, language and dress of Lucknow have always maintained the unique feature of this lovely city.

Legend has it, that Laxmana, younger brother of Lord Rama, was so enthralled by this picturesque site on the banks of the river Gomti, that he decided to lay the foundation of a city there, which was called Laxmanpuri. Years of colloquial alterations changed Laxmanpuri to present day Lucknow

During the reign of Nawab Wajid Ali Shah, Lucknow witnessed a resurgence of the Ganga/Jamuni culture of Awadh in all its dimensions from the classical traditions to folklore. Nawab Wajid Ali Shah's patronage gave kathak enormous scale and dimension. Kathak as a dance form found its spiritual place. Crafts of all kinds flourished in the city of Lucknow and its environs.

Invitation

Dear faculty members, students

Greetings from SGPGI with best wishes for a very happy and prosperous New Year 2017.

It is with great pleasure that we invite you all to "5th SGPGI-PG-ARC-2017". These are exciting times for anaesthesiologists as we continue to grow and adopt new techniques and technology to remain motivated, responsive and up-to-date.

The scientific sessions in "5th SGPGI-PG-ARC-2017" are designed primarily to meet the demands of postgraduates students and practicing anaesthesiologists alike. Our aim is to provide participants an opportunity for close contact with various clinicians, researchers and experts in their respective fields. Interaction with them will be of great benefit to the participants and their patients. We believe that participants of eminent national faculty who are experienced PG teachers from all over medical colleges and premier institute of India shall make this program successful.

A variety of teaching techniques including lectures & focused sessions on pro-con debates, interactive workshop and interesting video sessions are the mainstay of the program.

We are looking forward to your enthusiastic participants to make the "5th SGPGI-PG-ARC-2017" a memorable one.
