

Victims want part in talks on damages

to the General of India for the delay in ordering a recall and for in renewing J&J's licence to import the hip implants in August 2010 when it had been recalled in Australia in 2009.

"They called the company for discussions but never called the patients. The report of the expert committee submitted in February was not shared with the patients. We had to write to several authorities and push for the report to be made public, which happened six months after it was submitted," said Vijay Vojhala, who had his initial surgery in 2008 and the revision in 2012, at a press conference on Saturday.
